THE SAW-WHET OWLS OF MARYLAND

Melissa Boyle Acuti

Chief of Interpretation, MD Park Service

October 18, 2023

7:30 PM, EYC Conference Room

Maryland's smallest owl, the Northern Saw-whet Owl, weighs less than a bar of soap, yet travels thousands of miles over its lifetime. Each fall, these tiny travelers pass through Maryland during their annual migration.

Melissa, sometimes known as the "Owl Lady," is a park ranger and Chief of Interpretation for the Maryland Park Service. Since 2017, as a volunteer, Melissa has run an owl research and banding station at the Smithsonian Environmental Research Center in Edgewater. She looks forward to sharing her knowledge of these tiny owls and opportunities for citizen science.
